

COOKIE POLICY

Definition and types of cookies

A "cookie" is a small text file created on the user's computer when he accesses a particular site, with the purpose of storing and transporting information. Cookies are sent by a web server (which is the computer on which the visited website is running) to the user's browser (Internet Explorer, Mozilla Firefox, Google Chrome, etc.) and stored on the computer of the latter; they are then sent back to the website at the time of subsequent visits.

For the purposes herein, we distinguish between (i) technical and profiling cookies, depending on the function for which they are used and between (ii) first-party and third-party cookies, depending on the person who installs them.

Technical cookies are used for the sole purpose of transmitting a communication over an electronic communications network, or for what is strictly necessary to allow the appropriate functionality required and which guarantee the normal navigation and use of the website. For the installation and use of technical cookies, the prior consent of the interested party is not required. Technical cookies can be assimilated analytical cookies, made and made available by third parties for statistical purposes, if appropriate tools are adopted to reduce the identifying power of analytical cookies used, for example by masking significant portions of the IP address, and the third party does not cross information collected with those already available.

Profiling cookies are used to send advertising messages in line with the preferences expressed by the user in the context of surfing the net. The consent of the interested party is required for the use of profiling cookies. Taking into account the different subject that installs cookies on the user's terminal, depending on whether it is the same operator of the site that the user is visiting, or a different site that installs cookies through the first, is distinguished between first-party cookies and third-party cookies.
